Charges Of Hiding Shortage

Former Sergeant At Arms of House Is Indicted By Grand Jury

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(P)—Kenneth Romney, former sergeant-at-arms of the House, was indicted by a federal grand jury today on charges of concealing a $143,863 shortage in the accounts of his office.

Romney served as sergeant at arms from 1931 until January 1 when Republicans took control of congress from the Democrats. He was succeeded by William Russell, a Republican.

The grand jury investigation grew out of an audit of Romney's accounts by the general accounting office.

The three-count indictment alleged that Romney falsely misrepresented to auditors the amount of cash on hand in the office and "covered up by trick, scheme and device" the existence of the shortage.

The indictment charged Romney with "knowingly and willfully falsifying" figures in the accounts "with the intent of cheating, swindling or defrauding the government."

The sergeant at arms serves as a house "bank" where congressmen may make deposits and cash checks.

Maximum Penalty

The maximum penalty for conviction on each of three counts is a 10 year prison term and $10,000 fine.

Attorney General Clark, in a statement accompanying the announcement of the indictment said the first and second counts of the indictment alleged that:

"Romney falsely stated the amount of cash on hand in the accounts which the office of sergeant at arms submitted to the general accounting office for the months of May and October, 1946."

"The third count charges him with concealing and covering up in the accounts for the period in January 1, 1946 through Oct. 31, 1946, the material fact that a shortage of $143,863.77 existed in that he included as cash on hand certain items which he knew to be worthless as well as an alleged confession of a former employee to the theft of a sum of money from the office."

Finds One Dead, Two Wounded

Trumbull County Sheriff Ralph Milliken said the woman told him she fired the bullets from a .22 calibre rifle. He said he had been unable to establish a motive for the shooting.

Theresa, the two-year-old baby, was found in the bedroom of the Heston home. Margaret Mary, 3, was wounded in the right shoulder, but was said to be in fair condition. Mrs. Heston had a bullet wound in the abdomen.

Garrett Heston, the husband and father, said he discovered the dead and wounded members of his family upon his return at 3 a. m. from Youngstown, where he said he had been visiting friends.

Robt. M. Johns Receives Gift Of Rotary Pin

Presented as Past President and for Services Rendered

Robert M. Johns, who was the third president of the Sedalia Rotary club in 1923-24, and a charter member of the organization, was awarded a past president's pin at the regular Monday noon meeting of Rotary Club.

The award was made by W. O. Stanley, also a past president of Rotary, who announced that it had always been a practice of the organization to present such a pin to the retiring president, but that through oversight "Bob" Johns was never given one. The award was not only for service rendered as past president, but for the years of service which Mr. Johns had given Rotary.

The program was in charge of Gen. John C. McLaughlin, program chairman for the month of February, and was devoted to the Rotarian Magazine. Gen. McLaughlin stated this is one of the best in the field of "house organ" publications, because of its honest editorial policy, its unbiased attitude and its interesting news content, made possible by Rotary being an international organization which gives the magazine such a wide scope for its articles.

Several Spoke

Gen. McLaughlin called on Dr. Roy M. Keller, who gave a synopsis of an article "Inventory of Our Faith," by Roy C. Douglas; C. F. Scotten, who gave a report of the article "On Looking Under the Hood," by Henry Ford, and he gave a brief report on "The Rising Generation of Russia," by John Strohm. These articles were all in the January issue of Rotary Magazine.

J. U. Morris, president, who presided at the meeting, passed through the membership pictures of the five gifts which the Rotary organization distributed to Pettis county farm boys in January.

Rev. J. Fred King announced the Boy Scout pot luck supper which is to be held tonight at Liberty park, and Mr. Morris announced that there would be a Rotary board of directors meeting tonight at his office.

Guests, who were presented by John Schlaffer, were: Martin Gaudin, with Dan Dean; Harry Lambirth, with Lee Peabody; J. V. Kesterson, with Rev. J. Fred King; H. J. Cooney, with Rev. J. Fred King; Earl L. Hinden, of Kansas City, with Rev. J. Fred King; David Eisenstein, of Moberly, with his father, Victor Eisenstein; with Rotarians Jim Sill, of Warrensburg; Vern R. Allison, of Warrensburg; and E. Q. Bartley, Jr., of Ironton, Mo.

34 Boy Scouts Are Marooned

CLEVELAND, Feb. 10.—(P)—A rotary snow plow was dispatched today to aid in attempts to rescue 34 Boy Scouts marooned in two farm houses near Chardon in neighboring Lake county.

The scouts, all from Cleveland, made their way to the homes yesterday after spending Saturday night in three quonset huts at a nearby scout camp. Two scoutmasters, Jerry Madden, 21, and George Leimbach, 35, were with them.

The boys went to camp Saturday, taking with them sufficient food to last through lunch Sunday. They were to have been brought home yesterday afternoon.

All Time High For Tourists In Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 10.—(P)—Tourist business hit an all-time high in Missouri during 1946 with a volume of $169,000,000, officials of the state division of resources and development estimated today.

No accurate determination of the exact value of travel trade in Missouri has been devised, but the hotel, resort and restaurant businesses in the state reached a peak volume of $215,000,000 last year, including residential travel which cannot be considered tourist trade.

That figure is $27,500,000 higher than in 1945, and $141,800,000 more than in 1939, the last pre-war year for which travel business figures are available. In 1939, when $73,700,000 represented the volume of restaurant and hotel business in Missouri, reliable government estimates indicated tourist and travel trade brought $58,000,000 into the state.

Most New Business

Assuming only half of travel trade expenditures were subject to the 2 per cent sales tax, the contribution of travel business to general revenue of Missouri was $1,690,000 in 1946.

Officials point out that despite the fact part of the increased volume was due to increased food costs, it is apparent most of it is the result of new business.

MFA Elevator at Glasgow Burns

GLASGOW, Mo., Feb. 10.—(P)—The Missouri Farmers Association elevator here was destroyed by fire yesterday. Fire Chief Frank P. Rose, estimated the damage to the grain filled structure at $150,000.

The building burned to the ground despite the efforts of the local fire department aided by men and equipment from the departments at Slater and Fayette.

Court Upholds Hatch 'Clean Politics' Act

Forbids Federal Employees Taking Part in Campaigns

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—(P)—The supreme court upheld today that section of the Hatch "clean politics" act forbidding federal employees from taking active part in political campaigns.

The section fixing the penalty at dismissal from government service, exempts only the president and his official family, heads and assistant heads of executive departments, and policy-making officials.

The CIO Public Workers of America challenged the section on the grounds it violated constitutional rights of freedom of speech, press and assembly, and sought high court ruling.

Although the high court upheld the section, the justices so split that there was not a clear division.

Part Judges Took

Justice Reed delivered the court's opinion. Justice Rutledge dissented in part. Justice Black wrote a dissent, and Justice Douglas also wrote a dissent in which he disagreed in part with the majority's conclusions. Justice Frankfurter wrote a concurring opinion agreeing with the majority. Justices Murphy and Jackson took no part.

Assassination

Attempt Looked for

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 9.—(P)—Former Governor Ellis G. Arnall of Georgia spoke tonight before a scattered audience watched closely by plainclothes detectives from the police homicide squad.

The detective detail escorted Arnall from his hotel to the Auditorium after a radio broadcaster reported a rumor that an assassination attempt would be made. Nothing unscheduled occurred.

The 39-year-old ex-governor left by United Airlines plane after the address for Fresno, where he is scheduled to speak tomorrow.

Happy Memories of Sedalia

A letter was received recently by A. L. Bohling, president of the Central Business College, from H. Gomez, Jr., Mexico City, who attended C. B. C. here, and has happy memories of Sedalia.

Mr. Gomez stated that he wished an item run in the Sedalia newspaper which would read something like this: "H. Gomez, Jr., Paseo de las Americas y Heger Col. Chapultepec, Morales, Mexico, D.F. will be greatly disappointed and even offended if anybody from Sedalia, Mo., goes to Mexico City and does not contact him upon immediate arrival."

Italians Paying for Mussolini

Sadly and Silently Sign Treaty Which Reduced Country to Third Rate Power

By Joseph E. Dynan
PARIS, Feb. 10.—(P)—Italy signed sadly and silently today a peace treaty reducing her to a third rate power, stripped of colonies, indebted by reparations, her homeland reduced and her army and navy cut to a relative shadow. Yugoslavia, which will obtain a slice of the coveted Venezia Giulia, but not the Port of Trieste, which will become a free city, reversed herself and signed the treaty after protesting the boundary agreement.

Italy, paying for the crimes of Mussolini and Fascism, was the first of five axis nations to sign treaties which when ratified, will end World War II for all the world except Germany, Japan, Austria and Korea.

Following Italy, the scheduled called Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland to the mournful bench, as it were to link treaties with up to twenty allied nations. The United States had a part in all the accords except that of Finland, with which the United States never was at war.

Period of Silence
Italy observed a ten-minute period of silence at the 11 a. m. (4 a. m. CST) hour of the signing of her treaty, which the Italian constituent assembly and the major Allied powers still must ratify. Silent groups gathered at the tomb of the unknown soldier in Rome, a monument to better days when Italy fought against Germany in the first world war alongside the nations now her conquerors.

Workers stood idle. Merchants shuttered their stores.

Contrasted to the silent demeanor of the Italian signatory in Paris, the Yugo-Slav foreign minister, Stanjko Simic, declared Premier Marshall Tito's Russian-backed government was "roundly disturbed" at the treaty with Italy.

Regret by Yugo-Slavia
His statement said Yugo-Slavia "declares with regret" that the "demand and proposals" of Yugo-Slavia "have not been taken into consideration in a satisfying manner" in the political, military and economic clauses of the treaty, and "above all, in its territorial dispositions, which deprive the Yugoslavs of territory technically Yugoslav."

He specified the Canale river valley, the region of Gorizia, Venetian Slovenia, Monfalcone, Trieste and the northwestern section of Istria as areas which should have been awarded to Yugoslavia.

Cancelling Special Furlough Fares

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(P)—The war department announced today it has been informed that all rail and bus lines are cancelling special furlough fares for service personnel effective Friday, Feb. 28.

On Jan. 30, the carriers withdrew the reduced rates on rail and bus lines operating east of the Mississippi river. Today's action extends the cancellation to the remainder of the country.

Furlough fare tickets purchased prior to March 1 will be good for passage at furlough rates between the points and within the time limits shown on the tickets.

Dreaded Dole Returns to British Isles

Lack of Fuel Causes Electric Power Blackout

By Ed Creagh
LONDON, Feb. 10.—(P)—The dreaded dole came back to England and Wales today.

For the first time since the black depression days between the wars, hundreds of thousands of workers plodded through mist and slush to employment exchanges, where they waited in silence for unemployment benefits.

"I never thought we'd see this again," said a thin-faced foreman from one of the North London industries forced to close by the electric power blackout.

He'll get the standard benefit—24 shillings ($4.80) a week for himself and 16 shillings ($3.20) for his wife after a three-day waiting period.

There was no light in the drab hall where the men, most of them hatless with scarves knotted about the neck, waited for clerks at candle-lit desks to fill in their applications.

Very Little Light
There was little light, save seeping gray daylight, anywhere in the 24 blacked out counties where 22,000,000 persons live.

Mostly there were confusion, inconvenience, bewilderment and irritation.

"Worse than the blinking fly-bombs," growled a top-hatted bank messenger when he found a tea shop closed.

"You voted labor—I hope you're satisfied," said a girl behind the counter of a cigarette kiosk.

"It's a Tory plot," announced a man in a bus queue. "The rich have bought up all the coal—that's what's happened."

In some places, whole areas were blacked out by the pulling of a switch. Other sections were put on their honor to switch lights and machinery off. Most shops, banks, pubs and restaurants complied, and candle flames glowed cheerily, if ineffectively, through the gloom, restoring the aspect of Victorian England.

Piccadilly Circus went blue with patches of yellow. Many jewelers closed for fear of shoplifters.

Hardest hit, save for the vital industries, were housewives whose cooking and shopping arrangements, inconvenient at best for the past seven years, were completely disarranged and whose darkened homes in many cases were headless.

Into nearly every aspect of living the paralysis crept. Elevators stopped. Movie houses postponed opening until late afternoon. Dry cleaners refused business. Hair dressers turned customers away.

Public transport facilities were cut because increasing numbers of people had no reason to travel to their jobs.

The royal mint closed.

Argue Georgia Case March 10

ATLANTA, Feb. 10.—(P)—The State Supreme Court received today an appeal from the superior court ruling that M. E. Thompson is Georgia's acting governor and that the legislature had no authority to elect Herman Talmadge to the office.

The court clerk set the case for argument March 10.

Meanwhile, hearing of a suit between the two principals themselves resumed in the Henry county superior court at McDonough. There Thompson is seeking an order enjoining Herman Talmadge, elected governor by the legislature, from exercising executive authority.

Rob Paris Bank

PARIS, Feb. 10.—(P)—Five bandits carrying tommy guns threw downtown Paris into a turmoil today when they held up a bank and escaped with nearly $8,500 after a fun fight in the bank itself. The manager was wounded in the shoulder.

Heavy Fire Loses at Missouri Pacific Shops Early Today

Police Officer Answers Call, Gets Surprise

Police Officer Aubrey Jordan received quite a shock this morning at 9:20 o'clock when he answered a routine telephone call from the fire department and was promptly informed that his own home at 1305 East Third street was on fire.

The blaze was caused by sparks from a flue and approximately $1,500 in damage was done to the house and its contents.

Another police officer, Walter Smith, also lives at the same address.

A run was made later this morning at 11:15 when the sparks from a flue again caused a conflagration at 124 West Henry street where $5 damage was incurred as the result of a small roof fire.

Coroner's Jury Finds Crash Killed Reardon

Young Daughter Who Shot Him Did Not Testify

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 10.—(P)—A coroner's jury returned a homicide verdict today, after an inquest in the death of J. Vincent Reardon and ordered his 14-year-old daughter, Mary Catherine, held for the grand jury.

A homicide verdict was given also in the death of Mary's 13-year-old friend, Michael D'Arcy, who died of injuries suffered in the crash of a car Saturday morning, as Reardon was bringing the young couple back home from a tourist cabin.

Mary Catherine declined to testify at the inquest, on advice of her attorney. She told authorities just after the crash that she shot her father with a pistol because she feared he would put her in a girls' school. She and Michael were in the back seat of the car, and the bullet went through the back of Reardon's neck.

Crash Killed
Two physicians testified Reardon was killed by the crash injuries and not by the bullet.

In a six-page typewritten statement to St. Louis county authorities Mary Catherine said she and Michael planned to run away from home, and their first stop was the cabin at Wentzville, Mo., where they spent Friday night.

Prosecuting Attorney Stanley Walsh said that as a result of the tragedy he would prepare a bill for introduction into the state legislature aimed at stamping out "highly profitable traffic in immorality" in some tourist camps. Such legislation was recommended by the St. Louis county grand jury last September. The bill if enacted would subject tourist camps to regulations as strict as those now applying to hotels, inns and rooming houses.

Dance Hall Fire in Berlin

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—(P)—Rescuers, working in near zero temperatures, today had recovered 81 bodies from the ruins of the Karlstadt dance hall, razed by fire at the height of a Saturday night costume ball. Another 39 persons were in hospitals.

Capt. Frank Walter, British fire chief, said he did not expect the death toll to climb much higher.

A check of British rosters showed seven soldiers missing, the British provost marshal's office said. Four British soldiers were hospitalized with burns.

Meanwhile German authorities were attempting to identify the bodies. Only three of the 81 have so far been identified, they said.

Various causes were advanced for the holocaust—likened to the disastrous Coconut Grove blaze in Boston four years ago, which caused 440 deaths.

An army announcement said three British soldiers were found among the charred bodies, many of them unrecognizable. Other British army personnel were treated for burns. No American casualties were reported.

Head Workmen Called

Practically all of the foremen and supervisors of the shops were summoned. In discussing the fire they stated they did not care to be quoted, but from their knowledge of the expensive tools, parts and other equipment, and thousands of gallons of paints which were kept in the store rooms, estimated the loss would be high.

One local Missouri Pacific shop official said, "Do not quote me, but I can say it's the largest fire, according to loss, that ever occurred in Sedalia in my many years of being around here. If I was making an estimate, I would say the loss on building and contents will amount to at least $750,000, and maybe more."

The Daily Washington Merry-go-Round

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The navy's big brass, nettled over President Truman's insistence that the U. S. land, sea and air forces be united under one head, may find that big oaks from little acorns grow and that their troubles stem back to an incident of 1940.

Harry Truman, then Senator Truman, was a member of a point senate-house group inspecting U. S. air bases, and traveling in an army plane.

On the schedule was a stop at San Diego, Cal., where the navy had a complete air base, including paved runways and fine landing facilities. Near by was an army field, then being enlarged and its landing strips torn up. To add to difficulties, a heavy rainfall had given the field the appearance of a lake.

Truman's plane was supposed to land at the torn-up army field. But, arriving over the army base, the pilot decided to turn back and use the navy field with its clear and unflooded landing strips.

That was where his troubles began.

Radioing his difficulties to the navy field, the army pilot got word from the navy field offices that he was without authority to land any planes other than the navy's.

Then followed about 20 minutes of air-ground argument. But the navy stood pat. "Navy planes, only," it ruled.

Finally, the army pilot took a chance on the army field, bending a couple of propellers in the landing and shaking up his legislative cargo. Congressmen, after being loaded into trucks, headed for San Diego, most of them irritated by navy's adamant stand.

Bumping over the flooded field, Harry Truman remarked to a colleague:

"Something is rotten here. Perhaps all of the services—Army, Navy and Air—should become one."

That was where the navy's troubles really began.

Secret Story of the Vatican
Now that various war secrets are being told by former secretary of war Stimson and others, it may be appropriate to reveal the great human story of how one religious group cared for another during the war.

The story of how the Vatican saved thousands of Jews is told in a secret report by the war refugee board, an organization, largely non-Catholic, appointed by President Roosevelt to save religious minorities from Nazi death and persecution.

The report is couched in the unemotional, prosaic language of bureaucracy. But reading between the lines is one of the most human, dramatic stories of the war—how the pope gave refuge to Italian Jews in the sanctity of the Vatican, how the pope sent money into Hungary to help the terrorized Jews of that country, and how the Vatican worked closely with American Jewish organizations to send supplies to refugee camps inside Hitler's territory.

Here are some of the highlights of the unpublished refugee report: "Constant communication was had with Vatican circles through Ambassador Myron Taylor and Harold Tittman, American representatives at Vatican City, and through the apostolic delegate in Washington.

"Various appeals were addressed by the Vatican to authorities in Germany and the satellite countries in an attempt to halt deportations and other forms of persecution directed against Jews and other minority groups. When the Hungarian situation became particularly acute, a personal appeal for tolerance was addressed by Pope Pius XII to Hungarian regent Horthy. From the United States, Archbishop Francis Spellman addressed an impressive plea to the Catholics of Hungary, asking that they protect and help the persecuted.

Italian Jews Aided
"Vatican cooperation was likewise obtained," continues the war refugee board, "in helping afford relief to the Jewish community in Rome throughout the German occupation, the cost of these operations having been borne by the American Jewish joint distribution committee.

"The Vatican was similarly helpful in transmitting and supporting the board's request for alleviation of the lot of unassimilated persons detailed in enemy territory, at least to the extent of permitting them to receive relief parcels under the supervision of the international Red Cross.

"Vatican support was also lent to the board's efforts to insure protection to endangered persons in Axis territory holding Latin American papers."

The war refugee board also tells how the Vatican advanced money to save persecuted minorities in Hungary and established an underground to smuggle Jews in immediate danger of death out of that country.

Another instance of the invaluable assistance rendered through Vatican channels was courier service for the transmission of Palestine certificates authorized by the Jewish agency for endangered persons in enemy territory, notably the relaying of such certificates from the apostolic delegate in Istanbul to the nunciature in Budapest to enable their emigration from Hungary.

"Throughout the course of the war substantial amounts of money were placed by the Vatican at the disposal of the bishops of Hungary for the purpose of alleviating the sufferings of persecuted minorities."

Converted Jews
So determined was His Holiness to alleviate suffering of those whom Hitler had singled out for destruction, that he attempted to protect large numbers by alleging their conversion to Christianity.

"Perhaps the most unusual means of extending protection to endangered persons in enemy-controlled territory were the efforts of the Catholic church to save lives by means of conversion to Christianity. Nazi attempts to oppose these measures met with the response that the church had authority to baptize immediately any person who was in imminent danger of death. When the situation in Hungary grew more critical, groups of Hungarian Nazis entered churches and broke up religious classes being held for Jews, with the result that many baptisms took place in Hungarian air-raid shelters, where hundreds were baptized.

"Conversion to Christianity did not, however, permanently exempt persons of Jewish descent from Nazi persecution. Discriminatory and deportation measures

Nationwide Campaign Against Heart Disease

By John L. Springer
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Health and civic groups are calling on the public to join in a nationwide campaign against America's "number one killer." The killer is heart disease which, with blood vessel diseases connected with it, is responsible for one out of every three deaths in the country.

The American Heart Association, which is sponsoring "National Heart Week" from Feb. 9 to 15, calls heart disease "America's first public health problem," and says the fight against it can be won only if it is attacked "right where it lives—in the individual and in his community."

The association is made up of heart doctors, nurses, social workers and laymen interested in the problem and draws support for phases of its program from the American Medical Association and other health groups.

It says that today more than 3,700,000 Americans are victims of heart disease alone. Arteriosclerosis and high blood pressure (also called hypertension) claim another 3,700,000. Together, it says, these diseases cause more cases of chronic illness than any other single disease.

were generally extended to such converts in short order, as well as to partners of mixed marriages and individuals who had been Christians from birth and whose families had been Christian for generations.

All in all, there are thousands of non-Catholics alive today who have died in Nazi gas chambers, had it not been for the help of the Vatican and its cooperation with the American government.

Texas No Man's Land
El Paso's elder statesman Rep. Ewing Thomsom called at the White House this week to urge settlement of an old and famous dispute with Mexico which has bothered his constituents for three-quarters of a century—Chamizal. This is a famous semiland in the Rio Grande river which sometimes has been washed by floods to the Mexican side, sometimes to the Texas side. It knows: Nobody living on it knows whether he is Mexican or American.

Rep. Thomsom asked President Truman to try a little direct negotiation with President Aleman of Mexico in an effort finally to settle this 600 acres of disputed land.

Mexico has claimed Chamizal for years on the ground that it was created as the result of a "flash" flood in 1884. The boundary agreement between Mexico and the United States provides that when the channel of the Rio Grande, which is the border, shifts gradually, then the channel will continue to be the border. The disputed land, however, resulted from a sudden shift in the channel.

About 8,000 American citizens live on Chamizal and taxes are assessed at $4,000,000. Because it is not definitely U. S. territory, however, the department of justice has blocked Thomsom's attempt to win funds for a new federal building and an international bridge in the area.

Accordingly, Thomsom made a special plea to President Truman to take the matter up direct with President Aleman during his forthcoming good neighbor trip to Mexico City.

"This title dispute is a source of unending controversy and distress to the city of El Paso, Mr. President," Thomsom said.

Thomsom didn't promise what he could do in the end, but he did assure Thomsom he would take a file on the dispute with him to Mexico and try to discuss it with the Mexican authorities.

Note—A French mediator, appointed by both countries, awarded Chamizal to Mexico some years ago, but the United States refused to accept the decision.

Soviet in Argentina
It can now be revealed that the Soviet purchasing mission which went to Argentine eleven months ago has, to date, a record of almost complete failure to obtain the products it sought.

Contrary to reports published in the USA, the Russians were not primarily interested in buying linseed oil. What they wanted most were edible oils—sunflower seed, cottonseed and grape seed—plus oil cake.

However, the Argentine government refused to allocate them

Many Die of Heart Disease

Furthermore, while close to 325,000 Americans died in battle in World War II, during the same period 2,000,000 men, women and children on the home front were killed by heart or blood vessel diseases.

Dr. David D. Rustein, medical director of the association, says that public cooperation could reduce the death rate of heart disease—twice as virulent a scourge as dreaded infantile paralysis—and of subacute bacterial endocarditis, for which penicillin has been found useful in many cases. Paradoxically, Dr. Rustein says the association has no hopes of cutting the death rate of the heart diseases of middle and old age. However, he says, by proper treatment, persons in this age group can be made to live longer.

Need National Program

Officials of the association say war forcibly dramatized the need for a national health program to retard increases in heart disease. They say an estimated ten per cent of the men rejected by Selective Service were disqualified because of these diseases. In a survey of a special sampling of 5,000 rejectees for cardio-vascular diseases in five major cities—

Chicago, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco—50 per cent were disqualified because of rheumatic heart disease. The second greatest cause of rejection was due to cardio-vascular diseases, which accounted for 25.6 per cent of the disqualifications.

Organizations Cooperative

In many localities, organizations such as the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, the American Legion, Rotary International and Kiwanis International are co-operating with local heart associations in the "public education" campaign.

The immediate aim is to arouse public awareness of the factors causing heart disease. Often these factors are complex. For example, Dr. Rustein cites studies to show rheumatic fever and rheumatic heart disease are more prevalent among children exposed to overcrowded and damp housing. "If we want to win the fight against these diseases," he says, "we will have to get adequate housing. The authorities must be made to realize that individuals in rheumatic families should even get priorities on housing, if necessary."

Among the factors contributing to heart diseases in middle age are overweight, infections, prolonged worry or other emotional disturbances, and sudden physical exertions to which the body is not accustomed.

Consult Physicians

Authorities say physicians should be consulted if there is any chest discomfort caused by exertion or excitement; shortness of breath while resting or after exercise which did not previously produce it; noticeable misbehavior of the heart beat; and swelling of the feet and ankles. Doctors emphasize, however, that the heart may act oddly even when there is nothing wrong with it.

Over the longer range, Dr. Rustein says, the association's goal is to support research through grants in aid to universities and fellowships, etc., in heart studies. "There are a number of research leads, which if they could be applied generally, would make it possible to reduce heart disease for the younger age groups particularly," he says.

"The use of penicillin in treating one type of heart disease has been spectacularly successful. This was a product of research. If there is to be continued further improvement in heart treatment, a lot of basic research has to be made."

The first telephone man's 1847 CENTENNIAL 1947

Just 100 years ago next March 3 Alexander Graham Bell was born, to become, 28 years later, the world's first telephone man.

People were smiling away the newly invented telephone as just a clever toy when young Bell said: "I believe in the future a man in one part of the country may communicate by word of mouth with another in a distant place."

From that first telephone, and from that idea in the mind of the man who had invented the telephone, has grown America's Bell System.

The usefulness of this telephone system with its 25 million telephones lies in the unity with which its 18 operating companies work together. The Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, which serves you, is one of these.

The energies of this company go into the important job of providing your day-to-day telephone service. Specialized units in the Bell System handle other matters. Bell Telephone Laboratories, for instance, deals with research, with long-range improvements and economies. The Western Electric Company is manufacturer and storekeeper for the Bell System. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, parent company of the System, ties the work of all together.

It is a simple plan and it works. With it the Bell System more than fulfilled Alexander Graham Bell's prediction that a man might one day talk to another "in a distant place."

The "typical American" you hear so much about is five other fellows, according to findings of noted anthropologist Alice M. Brues, whose exhaustive analysis of U. S. soldiers' physical characteristics was recently published in the American Journal of Physical Anthropology. She found no one American type, but did find the five types sketched above, characteristic of national backgrounds

Man Held for Investigation

A man, who gave his name as Harry John Polos, and address 1420 Main street, Kansas City, was taken into custody about 11:30 Sunday night by the police and is being held for investigation. He was apprehended at the home of Frank Brosch, 608 West Second street, after he had been caught trying to get into the house of Leonard Rehak, 606 West Second street.

Seen trying to get into the house Brosch obtained a gun and stopped him and kept him covered with a gun until the police arrived. Polos at police headquarters refused to answer questions regarding the robbery of the home of W. C. Kreiser, 1623 West Sixteenth street, last Saturday night in which money totalling $109 and jewelry valued at more than $175 was taken.

Records carried in his billfold indicate he was discharged from the army in December 1945.

Portal to Portal Pay Suits Not Settled Yet

By James Marlow

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP)—A judge has thrown out the case which set the match under all the portal to portal pay suits but—

The fire isn't out yet, by a long sight. To see why—and how the problem got this way and where it may end—start at the beginning:

Five years ago the CIO union workers in a pottery company at Mt. Clemens, Mich., went into federal court and sued for overtime.

(They sued in federal court because the federal wage-law says workers must get paid overtime for all time worked over a certain number of hours a week.)

They said the company had told them on the side to get to work ahead of time. So they said they had overtime coming.

Judge Frank A. Picard figured the men had overtime due because, he decided, they actually had started production ahead of the regular time.

Company Appealed

(But he did not figure they had overtime due for the time spent going to their benches from the time clock and getting ready for work.)

The company appealed to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals which decided Picard was wrong and that the men had no overtime coming.

Then the union appealed to the highest court, the U. S. Supreme Court, which did this:

Like the court of appeals, it said Picard was wrong. That the men had not actually started production ahead of time. But—

It said the men should get some overtime for time spent in walking into the plant to their benches, getting ready for work and so on.

(This was where the portal to portal angle came in with a bang.)

Then the supreme court further told Picard to figure out exactly how much portal to portal pay the Mount Clemens workers should get.

(To figure that out, Picard would have to go all the way back to 1938 when the wage-hour law started.)

Back Pay Involved

(Which meant: the workers would get overtime dating back to 1938. That's what they were claiming.)

This supreme court decision was handed down last June. Other unions—mostly CIO—seeing a chance to get a lot of back overtime, filed similar portal to portal suits.

Those suits now near $5,000,000. Business men cried they'd be ruined if they had to hand out all that back pay.

Congressmen talked of passing a law to stop the suits. The treasury said it would lose billions in back taxes if the suits were paid off.

But—there was one very important point in what the supreme court told Picard about figuring portal to portal back overtime.

Government In

It told him not to consider any overtime that was "trifling." Then the government, through the justice department, stepped in.

The justice department attorneys asked Picard to consider as "trifling" the whole suit of the Mt. Clemens workers and to throw it all out.

That's what Picard did Saturday.

He said the "whole claim was trifling" and therefore the workers had no back overtime pay coming.

What happens now? Mt. Clemens workers' attorneys seem sure to appeal Picard's decision eventually back to the supreme court. That will take time. So nothing will be finally decided about portal to portal pay suits until the supreme court says its final say.

Meanwhile this question, which goes to the heart of the whole problem, remains unanswered:

Forgot To Write Answer

When does a workman's payable time start? When he actually starts production? When he walks in the door of plant? When?

Congress forgot to write the answer to that one in the wage-hour law when it passed it in 1938.

Because of that loophole, many congressmen want to amend the act in some way to say:

1. When work actually starts.
2. Or to prevent unions from collecting on their portal to portal pay suits.

There're talking now of going ahead and patching up the wage-hour law instead of waiting for the supreme court to give a final decision, which might be months from now.

Meanwhile this question, which goes to the heart of the whole problem, remains unanswered:

A Trip to the Moon and Back

Released by NEA Service

All aboard for the Moon! The rocket leaves at midnight! Back to Earth in time for a late breakfast! Round trip tickets only!

Scorers will kindly remember that they are the people who would have laughed at Columbus.

The moon is within reach. The trip will not be made tomorrow, but many rocket experts believe it won't be long now.

A lot of problems remain—and this is a semi-technical discussion of how they may be solved.

The following plan seems to the author the most feasible because of its minimum power requirement, simplicity of navigation and adaptability to the techniques of modern aviation.

A rocket ship will be used. It must leave the earth, assisted at first by a carrier plane, and gain enough velocity to cover the distance to the moon in a reasonable period of time and arrive with a residual velocity which will permit a swing around the moon at a height of about 10 miles. Then the ship

This is the first of six sketch-stories adapted from an article in the American Journal of Physics, "A Trip to the Moon and Back," by Henry A. Erikson, emeritus professor of physics at the University of Minnesota. These stories take such a journey out of the realm of fantasy and into scientific literature, describing in semi-technical language the problems of mechanics and navigation and the surprising reactions of the rocket ship's passengers.

must return to the earth for a safe landing.

The rocket ship is a monoplane of the jet-propulsion type. The housing is of sheet aluminum alloy, strong enough to sustain air at atmospheric pressure within when there is a vacuum outside. Walls have horizontal compartments. Air in these compartments exposed to the sun may be interchanged with air within the ship by means of a manually driven fan. There is an extra supply of oxygen, and air-purifying equipment.

The 5.6 tons of fuel and exhaust mass take up about 180 cubic feet of space.

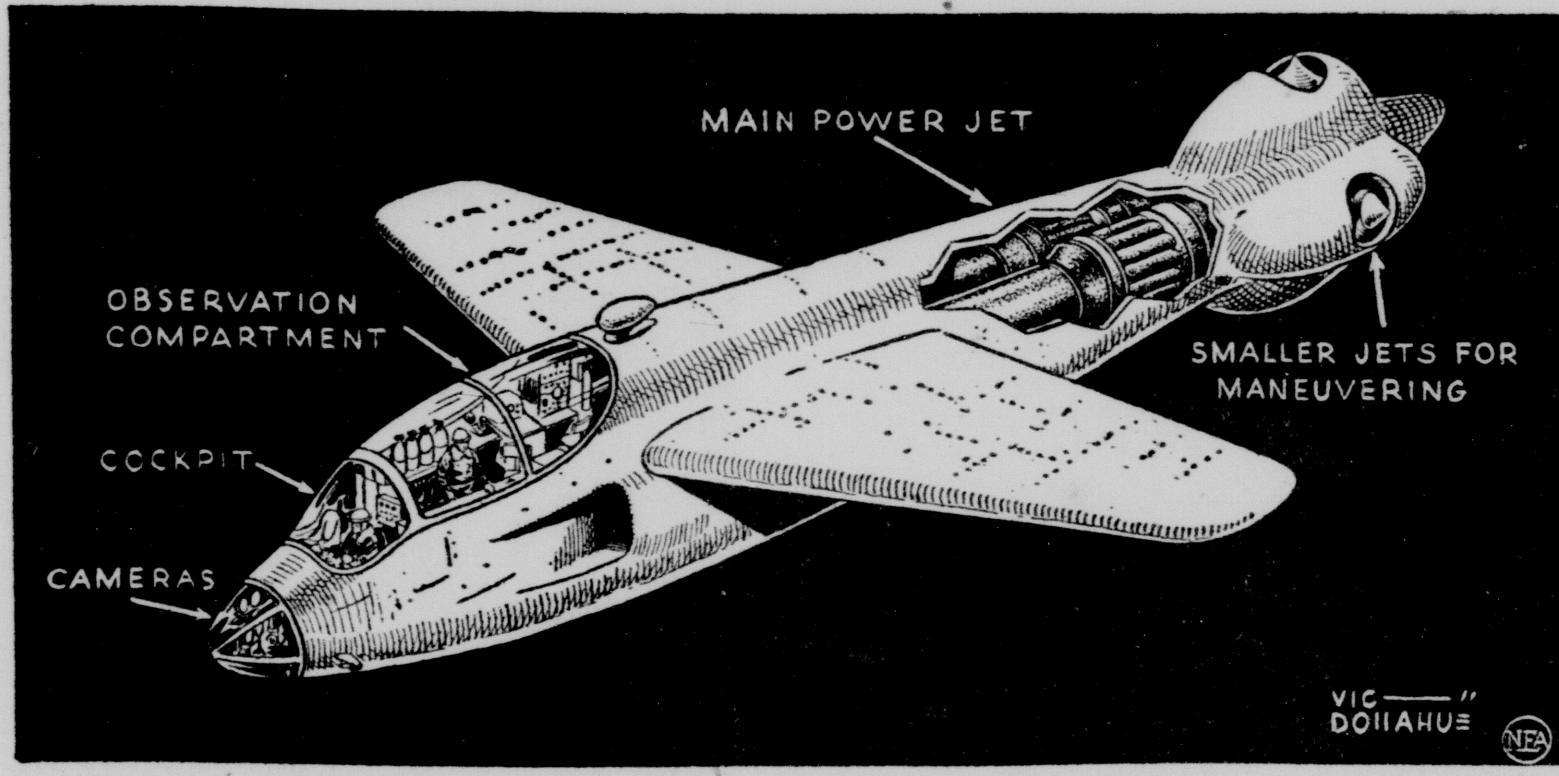

The main power jet is in the axis of the ship at the stern. This jet can increase the speed of the ship only in the direction of the axis, the center of mass of the ship being also in the axis.

For maneuvering purposes there are four small jets in the stern, set at right angles to the axis and to each other. By means of these four jets the axis of the ship may be given any direction, even turned so that the ship is traveling stern first. Two opposite jets of the four also mounted so that their angles in the plane of the four jets may be changed, thus making it possible to roll the ship.

The ship must have a total speed potential of at least 4 miles per second, or about 14 thousand miles an hour. This assumes an exhaust speed of 2 miles per second, a speed not yet attained, but within theoretical limits of some of the fuels available.

An exhaust speed of 3 miles per second, however would make the trip much less difficult. This speed may be obtainable in the future if scientists can obtain atomic energy through the use of comparatively small quantities of fissionable materials. This might enable them to vaporize materials such as water, mercury or lead to obtain the higher exhaust speed. It must be remembered that the velocity of a rocket depends on the magnitude of the escaping mass as well as on its speed of escape.

Assuming an exhaust speed of 3 miles a second, the best strategy seems to be the use of a carrier plane from which to launch the rocket ship at 55 miles above the earth, at a horizontal speed of 4.9 miles per second and vertical speed of .82 per second.

The ship will then coast to a height of 100 miles where, after minor corrections in velocity by means of the ship's own power, it will automatically move in a circular orbit around the earth at that height at a constant speed of 4.86 miles per second.

Now, with the more or less technical details behind us, we are ready for the trip.

Tomorrow: Life beyond force of gravity.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Gayle Talbot (For Hush Fullerton, Jr.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 10—(P)—South Africa, judging from a sheaf of clippings just arrived, is very much excited about the coming series of 20 hand-to-hand golf duels between our Sammy Sneed, the British Open champion, and Bobby Locke, the South African links king who chased Sneed to the wire at St. Andrews' last summer. They meet in an opening 36-hole test on Wednesday, and from there on they will be at it every few days, sometimes at 36 holes and sometimes at 72. The South Africans long have wanted to see Locke, their perennial champion, matched against a real top-notch and the crowds are expected to be huge, especially at Johannesburg.

Jack Harris, the American promoter who managed a recent tour of the union by a quartet of American tennis pros, and who stayed on to arrange the Sneed-Locke series, writes that "South Africa is very much sports conscious, and they have more real sportsmen per capita than any place in the world. They have an ideal climate and if we can continue to send our American athletes over here it would prove a tremendous incentive to them. We have opened their eyes with the quality of tennis that can be played, and they now are thinking of getting some fine professionals to teach their youngsters. I played a few holes with Locke when I first arrived, and in my opinion he is one of the four or five greatest golfers I have ever looked at. Sneed will have his hands full trying to beat Bobby on South African courses."

In their naive (internationally speaking) attitude toward the impending matches, the South Africans actually appear more interested in seeing that Sneed gets a fair shake than in doing everything possible to assure victory for their own idol. Consider this from one of their golf writers: "In preparing the course for the matches it is to be hoped that the club officials will consider the advisability of soaking the greens before the matches. American players are used to playing to holding greens, with a definite target to shoot at. If we should have a spell of dry weather before the matches the ground will be fast and hard and the visitors would be handicapped severely in playing runup shots."

CHICAGO, Feb. 10—(P)—Circuit Judge Robert J. Dunne says he would like to have "nosy interlopers" and "meddling in-laws" brought into his court along with the principals in some divorce cases before him.

"If I could figure out a way to get jurisdiction over these nosy interlopers," he said, "they'll go to the county jail."

Boyle Suggests a Cuspidor For a Valentine

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK, Feb. 7—(P)—News item: "Refusal of 6,000 New York scrubwomen to clean cuspidors may doom these symbols of masculinity."

Today we hymn the cuspidor, A target etched in nicotine, Which union ladies say no more They'll labor with fair hands to clean.

The brass bowl of the barroom floor, The rubber mat that caught the errors, Are heirlooms of that vanished yore When germs and microbes held no terrors.

The bright new world for which we burn May cheer the dainty—I deplore Its sanitary blight and yearn To keep the robust cuspidor. O sing unto it roundelay, O chant a saddened dirge with me, The cuspidor has had its day—And so have men who once were free.

Turning from verse to perhaps worse, I want to blow a verbal trumpet to save the old-fashioned spittoon, a maligned relic of a braver day.

Since man first quelled the saber-toothed tiger with firebrand and spear, he has seen a steady whitening down of his area of masculine superiority.

From a glorious wild animal of unlimited power and freedom he has been ground down through the centuries to the status of a caged squirrel by the long disapproval of womenfolk, laws, and traitorous tame males—the "Judas goats" of their own sex.

He used to hunt, this son of nature, and ate first from the family pot, being followed by the women, who gnawed the lectured wood for the fire. Now man passes the first plate to his mate, helps dry the dishes afterward and carries in the coal and hauls out the ashes.

Used to Learn From Men

He used to learn how to be a man from the older men, proven hunters. Now old maids and young girls teach him the feminine etiquette they invented.

He used to wear the brightest feathers like the wild male bird still does. Now he wears a suit of dun and channels all his lost flamboyancy into a piddling red tie.

He used to sing the tribal songs and jump high in the tribal dances by the light of an October moon. Now he sits by a radio listening weakly to an ear-beating soprano.

He used to preserve the sanctity of his home with a flint hammer he made himself. Now he can't take a pot shot at a Mosse or his wife's lover with a bean shooter without buying a hunting license.

He used to throw out his chest. Now he is two paces behind his stomach.

Women have forced him to give up his beard, his barroom stool, his seat in the barber's chair. They have taken away his wonderful oaths and reduced his rich earth-flavored language in these old retreats to the hypocritical level of co-educational prattle.

A Hard Life

Yea, they have followed him unto the ball game and the wrestling match and denied him the union on his hamburger.

Decadent man has been stripped to the last bare privilege—the right to spit (excuse the horrid word). It is the sole masculine prerogative left.

Women don't like to spit—(there's that word again). They say so. The truth is, they don't know how and for some reason can't learn. They probably have a physiological defect. No woman ever looks more helpless and inefficient than when she tries to—you know the word now.

So they want to deny man the one thing he can do more ably than they.

"Save the Cuspidor"

Men of America—Fight to save the cuspidor! It is the challenge of your final freedom. It is the only cup left to express your disdain of the world's injustice. Defend it! If the union ladies will have no further hand in this problem—and that is their privilege too—then let's impress fire-hoses or steam jets or all the other sanitary paraphernalia of a germ-wary civilization to keep a golden polish on the cuspidor, the repository of liberty-loving men.

Discard these masterpieces of floorboard architecture, men, and you—the cutdown parody of hairy, free-booting ancestors—will soon yourselves join the Great Auk, the Dodo and the Passenger Pigeon.

Our slogan must be "As the gobbler goes, so goes mankind!" Ask your girl friends to give you one for a valentine, fellows. And keep 'em shining.

Special recognition was given the club members who were county and state contest winners in 1946. Awards were presented by J. U. Morris, county agent and Esther Dilsaver, home agent. Recognition was given the following members: Rose Mary Klein, National Club Congress trip winner; Gordon Leiter, Charles Nuzum and Wesley Gene Schlobohm, $25 savings bond and county medal winners; Robert Weikal, Walter E. Gardner, Cecil Monsees, Donald Harsch, Dorothy Riechhoff, Carl Harvey Landes, Leroy Weller, Laverne McMullin, Andrew Smith, Jr., G. B. Thompson, T. H. Gibson, Melvin Hurd, Ella Dee Runge, Stella Sperber, Loretta Hayes, Robert Knight, Lloyd Cunningham and Harold Coffman, county medal winners; Betty Leiter, Ruth Harvey, Lois Eichholz, Shirley Eichholz, Evelyn Bultemeier, Bonnie Bultemeier, Lois Burton, Dixie June Thomas, and Lorene Klein, dress revue medal winners.

Five Teams For County

Before presenting the special awards J. U. Morris told of the 4-H accomplishments for the past year. Five of the seven district judging teams, from this area, in the State Roundup were from Pettis county. The club enrollment in the county the past year was one of the highest for a number of years.

Mrs. P. S. Read gave due recognition to the 140 community and project leaders and all 4-H parents who worked so faithfully in the interest of the 629 4-H club members.

Olen Monsees, president of the Pettis County Farm Bureau presented 4-H achievement pins to those club members who had completed their first, third, fifth, or seventh year of club work. Four-H recognition cards were presented to those members who had completed their second, fourth, sixth, eighth, and ninth years of club and project work. Four-H club charters were presented to leaders of twenty community clubs by Esther Dilsaver.

This year a county 4-H plaque was given to one of the outstanding clubs in the county. J. U. Morris presented the plaque to Miss Thelma Brunkhorst, community leader of the Walnut Grove club. The plaque is to be an annual award with the name of the winning club engraved on it each year.

Discussion on a county 4-H chorus was led by Mrs. Eugene Helman, community leader of the Quisenberry 4-H club. A chorus has recently been organized in the Quisenberry club. Other county

Presenting Pin Awards

Olen Monsees, president of the Pettis county Farm Bureau, is presenting achievement pins to 4-H club members at the annual 4-H Recognition meeting held recently at Liberty park in Sedalia. Each year the Pettis county Farm Bureau presents achievement pins to those 4-H members who have completed their first, third, fifth, seventh and tenth years of club work.

Presenting 4-H Plaque

J. U. Morris, Pettis County Agent, presents the county 4-H plaque to Miss Thelma Brunkhorst at the annual 4-H recognition meeting held at Liberty Park. The plaque, an annual award, is presented to the Walnut Grove club for outstanding work done in 1946. Miss Dorothy Bacon, former Home Demonstration Agent of Pettis county, is the donor of the bronze plaque which was given to promote 4-H club work in Pettis county.

4-H events for 1947 were outlined briefly by E. P. Kruse, assistant county agent. The sound motion picture film "Springtime in Missouri" was shown at the meeting.

Following the program 4-H members engaged in active group games until a late hour.

Others who assisted in the planning of the meeting were Merle Vaughn, associate county agent, and Mrs. Ralph Dow, Mrs. Wilburn Hayes, William P. McCune, Earl Wood, and J. W. Bissler all members of the Rural Youth committee.

Windbreaks Big Help To Protect Land

Demonstration Be Held March 28 On W. S. Stark Farm

A windbreak tree planting demonstration will be held on the W. S. Stark farm on Friday, March 28. Both the location of a windbreak and the best method to plant a tree will be demonstrated. Mr. Stark lives on the 16th street road, 7 1/2 miles west of the fair grounds.

Windbreak plantings are effective in Missouri for winter protection, and to retard wind erosion in sandy areas, according to L. E. McCormick, extension forester of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture.

Dense evergreen tree windbreaks of four or more rows are used throughout the state for protection from winter winds and the one to three row windbreaks or hardwood species are used extensively in the southeastern part of the state to control blow sand for crop protection.

Windbreaks for farmsteads should be planted on the north and west sides because the prevailing winds in winter are from those directions. The ideal winter windbreak is L shaped with the legs extended just beyond the area to be protected. Plantings to control wind erosion will be more or less controlled by fence lines. In southeastern Missouri, many plantings bisect the fields and reduce the distance fully exposed to the wind.

Cut The Velocity

A windbreak is effective in reducing the wind velocity on the leeward side over a distance of 8 to 15 times the height of the trees depending on the species and density. Studies show that wind velocity can be reduced 50 per cent for a 30-mile wind. Hardwood species which shed their leaves in the fall are not as effective as evergreen species for winter protection, but are satisfactory in controlling wind erosion during the growing season. Drifting snow varies with wind direction but most frequently oc-

4-H Club Winners

Four-H members who received special recognition for the good club and project work which they accomplished in 1946. Some of the 4-Hers won awards, county medals and war savings bonds at the annual 4-H recognition meeting. Others were state judging team members. Club members in the first row left to right are Kenneth Weikel, Robert Knight, Emmett Fairfax, Elton Leiter, Leroy Weller, Cecil Monsees, Wesley Gene Schlobohm, Charles Nuzum, and Harold Coffman; second row Shirley Eichholz, Amelia Waller, Evelyn Bultemeier, and Virginia Fairfax; third row Ella Dee Runge, Esther Leiter, Bonnie Bultemeier, Mary Ruth Booth, Dixie June Thomas, Stella Sperber, Betty Chamberlin, Anna Lee Harvey, Marguerite Welliver, Ruth Harvey, Lois Eichholz, Loretta Hayes and Anna Mae Welliver; fourth row Carl Harvey Landes, Walter E. Gardner, Donald Harsch, G. B. Thompson, Gordon Leiter and Charles Williams.

three times the height of the trees. Consequently, windbreaks need be planted from 100 to 300 feet from farm buildings. The possibility of blocking roads must also be considered.

The trees need be staggered in rows to increase the effectiveness and to allow more space for development of the individual trees. A distance of 6 1/2 by 6 1/2 feet can be used in spacing but rows are frequently spaced 10 to 12 feet apart to allow the use of farm machinery in moving or cultivating. This distance is always necessary between out side rows and fences to prevent livestock browsing on the young trees, and to provide a passage.

Plantings need be made in the spring, preferably on a site cultivated in the fall.

Season On To Study Seed Catalogues

This is the season for studying the seed catalogs. Garden planting time will soon be here and you will want to be ready to plant.

Nearly all kinds of garden seed can be obtained at local stores. Seeds are already on display. It's easier to buy them early while there is a good supply and you can choose the best varieties.

Now is the time to plan your garden so you will know how much seed you will need. The Missouri vegetable planting calendar prepared by the University of Missouri College of Agriculture will make garden planning easy. This planting calendar can be obtained by asking your county extension agent for a free copy.

Seed from a 500-pound bale of cotton will yield 140 pounds of vegetable oil, 400 pounds of cattle feed, 240 pounds of hulls and 81 pounds of lint.

FERTILIZE YOUR LAND TO KEEP ITS PRODUCING POWER UP!

Is it easy to load? Is it easy to unload? Does it do a good job of spreading all kinds of manure? Is it built to last? These are the questions that you will ask when you consider buying a spreader. To all these questions the answer is YES when you ask them about the MOLINE!

The MOLINE SPREADER has always been the first choice of farmers who demand the best—a spreader that is light but sturdy, easy to load, easy to pull and having sufficient capacity to reduce time and labor. The MOLINE SPREADER more than meets these requirements. It is the lowest built spreader on the market. Owners say it is the easiest to pull—even with its large capacity load of 50 to 60 bushels. You will appreciate, too, its ample wheel and bottom clearance for flexible operation even in the roughest fields. The Moline is equipped with a patented wide distributor made especially to do a better job of shredding and spreading.

Check for $981,660,783

On rural routes everywhere in America, on sunny highways of the north, on sunny by-ways of the south, live the 5,500,000 ranch and farm families who produce America's supply of food. It's a big supply, too, the greatest in the world. From your farms and ranches in 1946 came livestock, dairy and poultry products and crops to the value of about twenty-three billion dollars, according to latest available government estimates. Meat animals and dairy and poultry products accounted for about 60 percent of the total farm cash income, current estimates reveal. Agriculture, the nation's most essential industry, is "big business" in every sense of the phrase.

Of all your cash income last year, $981,660,783* came from Swift & Company in payments for livestock and other agricultural raw materials. We purchased your livestock and other products and converted them into millions of pounds of quality meats, valuable by-products, other foods and products. Part of the money you received

Soda Bill Sez: . . . what's wrong with people is not their ignorance, but the number of things they know that aren't so.

For People . . . By People

We at Swift & Company think of our business as being owned by 63,365 people, the shareholders and their families, and operated by 66,000 employees. We provide essential services for agricultural producers and many other large groups of people. Employment is created for other thousands who work for railroads, trucking firms, livestock commission houses, stockyards companies, and the suppliers who furnish us salt, sugar, boxes, barrels, machinery and a thousand-and-one other things. A part of the business of thousands upon thousands of retailers everywhere in the nation is in purveying Swift's quality meats and other products to millions of American families.

In return for all the effort that made these services possible, the folks who work for Swift earned $164,013,099 in wages and salaries in 1946. This sum is 88% of the total remaining after all bills except taxes were paid, and is ten times more than the company's total net profit.

FEED VALUES ARE SOIL VALUES

by Wm. A. Albrecht
University of Missouri

Recently a farmer friend of mine told me, "I've moved to another farm where I get bigger yields in all my feed crops. But even though I shovel much more corn and pitch a lot more hay, I can't get my calves to market as early. I'm just not growing as much meat per acre."

This man doesn't realize that feed bulk is no indication of feed value. Livestock will not gain more on larger rations unless the feed value of any crop is derived from the basic plant food elements found in the soil. The crop must first build up the woody structure that makes up its bulk. Then, if soil conditions are right, the plant will store up a supply of the raw materials of protein, vitamins, and mineral compounds. Thus, whether a crop offers anything more than bulk and fattening power depends on the condition of the soil on which it grew. Livestock may be fed great quantities of feedstuffs produced on poor soils and still fail to gain weight. It is soil that has been guarded against erosion, fertilized properly, and carefully managed, that grows nutritious crops. Such soil will produce crops that give better feeding results and make more meat per acre.

"WHERE DID THAT $1,308,364,155 GO?"

During 1946 Swift & Company received $1,308,364,155 from the sale of its products and by-products. By the end of the year the Company had earned a net profit of $16,394,739, which is slightly less than 1.3¢ on each dollar of sales.

What happened to the rest of that money?

Well, the largest part was paid to farmers and ranchers who sold us livestock and other agricultural products. They got $981,660,783* or 75¢ out of the average sales dollar we received for products sold, including all by-products such as hides, wool, soybean meal, etc.

The next largest portion of our sales dollar went to all Swift employees. Their share of the dollar was 12.6¢.

Fuel, barrels, boxes, paper, salt, sugar and other supplies took 4.8¢ out of the average dollar.

Transportation took 2¢. (Meat travels, on the average, over 1,000 miles from producer to consumer.)

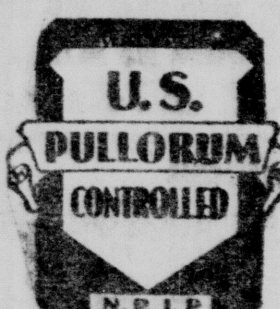

Taxes took another 1¢. All other expenses, including depreciation, interest and miscellaneous business costs, amounted to 3.3¢.

All these costs taken out of the sales dollar left 1.3¢. This was Swift & Company's net profit in 1946—a profit of only 1/4 of 1% on each pound of the millions of pounds of products and by-products handled.

Donations Support
Clinical Research
By William A. O'Brien, M. D.
Written for NEA Service

Although medical research is costly, the results have justified the huge expenditures necessitated.

The Council of Pharmacy and Chemistry of the American Medical Association points out that while laboratory research has been fairly well supported, investigations involving patients (clinical research) have not received adequate financial assistance.

Physicians who derive their personal incomes from hospitals, clinics or universities, or from private or industrial practice, do not accept pay for performing clinical research. It is necessary, however, to employ assistants to carry out the details of each investigation, and these persons must be paid for their work.

To evaluate the effect of treatment or to study the natural course of an illness, laboratory tests may be necessary. Extra help is generally required to perform such tests, for the regular hospital laboratories usually are overburdened with routine service.

Much of the required observation work is performed by members of the nursing staff, and additional nurses must be hired from the research fund if competent nursing observations are to be assured. Proper record-keeping is essential, and adequate clerical and stenographic assistance must be obtained for that purpose.

It may be necessary to bring patients into the hospital for varying periods of time, or to have patients remain a little longer, in order to complete some observations. The patient should not be asked to pay for this extra period of hospitalization; this money, too, must come from the clinical research fund.

Most institutions have the equipment necessary to carry on medical research, but extra supplies, janitorial service, utilities, etc., must be provided. In the face of rising costs and scarcity, a contingent fund must be set aside to guarantee adequate financial support.

Everyone Benefits
Clinical research can no longer be supported on a shoestring if it is to contribute to the advancement of medicine. Large foundations, individual donors, and industrial and public funds should give more money for long-time research projects, for all will benefit directly from the discoveries thus made possible.

Love Has Two Faces

By Irene Lamm Ewbank
Copyright, 1947.
NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Cassie Fletcher is the main support of her family and feels such a burden of responsibility toward them that she turns down Mike Cavendish's proposal of marriage, even though she is in love with him. When Mike, who is 17-year-old, tries to elope, they are headed off by friends and Parker Hamilton, a friend of Mike's. The next day Leni, Cassie's sister, brings Cassie a note for Leni from Leni.

She had on a new brown hat, high-crowned and sleek, tilted rakishly over one eye, and her hair grown long now was brushed into a soft, shining sheath. You had to keep up a good appearance when you worked in the Cavendish building.

She came out of the elevator in a hurry, wanting to get a bus before the crowds came from the stores. She ran squarely into a tall man, and when she looked up, aware of the smell of tweed and tobacco, and expensive cologne, he grinned.

"Hello there, spitfire," he said. He took her elbow and led her aside from the crowd.

His shy but infectious grin brought an answering upward tilt to her own mouth. If she had been unbearably rude to him he had evidently forgotten, or decided to ignore it.

"Do you work here?"

"I nodded."

"I wondered if I wouldn't run into you somewhere again. I—"

He gave her a quizzical examination, "I rather wanted to—in spite of—well—"

"I'm sorry I was so unpleasant," Cassie said. "It's nice seeing you again." She started to go.

"Wait. Wait a minute." He touched her arm again. "How about letting me drive you home. It's such a bad day. Raining."

"It isn't raining now," Cass said, looking out.

"But it will at any moment." Her laughter mingled with his and he took her arm.

It was rather nice, having a man handing you into a fine car, someone like Parker Hamilton, so that people looked with respectful curiosity, and the other girls from the Cavendish building going along the street stared enviously.

"How's Leni?" He started the car.

"Fine." She noted that his face was very tanned. Her own summer tan had almost disappeared by now. His hands on the wheel were brown, long, strong-looking hands.

"The Cavendish family is coming to Mortonville for Christmas, I think." Maybe he was aware of her faint stiffening, for he added, "Maybe I shouldn't have mentioned it. Has Leni heard from him?"

"Once or twice, I think."

She wanted to think of something to say. It was queer—it took a chance encounter like this with someone she almost disliked, to make her realize how lonely she'd been lately.

"Have you been away?" she asked. "You look so tanned."

"Oh that." He laughed. "I spend a lot of time on the farm we own up the river. I fished all of October, and then, we've got some bird dogs I like to take out for a run now and then. There's been some repair work done on the house too, and I had to supervise that. Nothing for me to do around the bank while Dad's still active, you know. Finances and stuff bore me stiff, anyhow."

"It must be nice to be rich!" It was out before Cassie knew it, a sarcastic, cutting statement.

"Nice?" He gave her a long straight look. "Oh, I don't know. It isn't so nice to have no purpose in life, nothing to look forward to. No—well—no nothing."

"I suppose not." At least, she was thinking, it was pleasant not to have to grub all day in a stuffy office, punching a typewriter, writing dull business letters, and then go home to more dullness. It was fine also to look well dressed—to have that effortless look of quality!

He interrupted her thoughts. "Let's don't quarrel again, please!" She said nothing. They were on Carson street and it had started to rain again, the wind blowing raw and wild, whipping through the bare trees, whipping off a few last brown leaves, sailing them through the air.

"Could I see you again, Cassie?" he asked suddenly, as he parked the car in front of the house. He turned toward her, and there was something hungry in his face that stopped the negative answer on the tip of her tongue.
